DO WE NEED CONFEDERATION?

This Was Forced on Us

Confederation will destroy our colony's. It encourages a weak central government for example. Each of the thirteen states will continue to govern themselves, which is under Articles of Confederation. This means that there won't be a central government to implement laws. Our colonies won't feel united, which is a big problem if we need to come together and decide on something as one nation.

Another downfall of Confederation is the language barrier. A lot of French speaking people will have to learn English, especially if they are business owners. Food companies and newspapers will legally have to print in both languages. This can even put a strain on salaries. We don't need Confederation; it will be our downfall.

Confederation would benefit so many different people. For example, due to confederation coverage, newspapers will sell more and will have increased their growth. Businesses will also get more clients because of Confederation, due to people moving to other colonies.

Confederation also encourages trade. Trade will be highly encouraged by the governments and will open new jobs. Instead of the colonies looking internationally for needed services or goods, the constitution encourages that we work together to form a sense of unity.
